BUT BE CAREFUL WITH IT, BECAUSE WATER IS THE SAVIOR OF YOUR LIFE AND ALSO THE REASON FOR YOUR DEATH TOO. SO DON'T MESS WITH IT!

WATER IS A SOURCE OF LIFE THAT HAS ALL THE CREATURES OF THE PLANET INTERLINKED TO EACH TO EACH OTHER AND IT IS A GIFT TO US FROM MOTHER NATURE THAT HELPS IN MAINTAINING THE BALANCE OF THE WORLD.

LET IT FLOW! LET IT BE STILL!
LET IT EXPAND! LET IT DRY!
LET IT BE FREE!!!

chapter 01 the list

I was given a cardboard that was laser cut in the fabrication lab, but it demanded more work; thus, I painfully re-cut the open wound with my handy X-Acto knife. One presumes flawlessnes from machines in completing a task, but this moment proves otherwise. As I penetrated the dell knife into the soulless body, my classmates witnessed the killing act. "Want to come to Liverpool with us for a night after the Fab Fest?" Mimu said from behind Heradi and Carmela. Maybe she was afraid of my reactions to her last-minute planning, but my eyes were still directed toward the cardboard. "Sure"

There were not many things on the list of adventures I wanted to experience, such as feeding a lion, Sky diving, and last-minute planning, but that day of completing the 9-meter wide by 9-meter high pavilion proved that not everything could be planned. The speaker announced the winner of the competition of the Fab Fest event, but I did not recall the legibility of the pronunciation. I asked Heradi for confirmation, and it was US! First prize! To beat among the top universities. Unsure If my professor paid his way for us to win, but the journey to win was our end goal.

Mimu is an ardent fan of the Beatles, which was the reason for the trip to Liverpool. Her love for the band outweighed our perspective on the journey, but nevertheless, we traveled to the city. As we arrived at our hostel, I saw beautiful three-story high old brick masonry buildings. Where the materials have faced many years of fighting against nature, but they still stand. The window trims still attach to the skin, and the eyes of the windows still see. The well-maintained homes prove that locals are in love with their homes as much as Mimu love with the Beatles.

At the end of the night, exhausted from walking and learning all there is about the Beatles, Heradi and I chatted and decided to stay longer than the group's itinerary. We felt unfulfilled from our day trip and wanted to learn more about the magical city that glows at night, which led us to embark on an exciting adventure. During our stay in Liverpool, we received a list of recommendations from a local who had helped us at a shoe store in downtown Liverpool. On the night of our bar crawl, we were pleasantly surprised by many detours. We encountered an Elvis impersonator who walked into a pub as we drank, walked, and talked on the street. In addition, we met a woman who rapped Kanye West's song "you can't tell me nothing".

This experience from the list of items that I received was, in fact, what exposed me to the community. To see old English row bricks arrayed across the pub aged so well. The stains on the door header relieve years of exposure to the elements, and the smell of drinkers made me wonder what it means to be a visitor, a guest, and a local.

Mimu managed to persuade the whole class to take a trip to Liverpool to experience the Beatles phenomenon. I was amazed at how convincing she was, but I later realized that her passion for the band was an essential part of her life. I think the reason behind it was one of the band members' relationship with a Japanese woman. Nonetheless, it was a good excuse to travel north. During the Beatles tour, I got to know Liverpool as a visitor and learned about the songs' origins at a specific time and location. However, I don't remember much about the in-between travels. This experience taught me how to piece together fragments of memories to represent a location and time.
